

Code-talkers Pgs. 5-11

Remember “Snapshots” vs “Thoughtshots”

Snapshot – a brief, vivid description of a particular scene or moment. In a snapshot, an author temporarily zooms in on a person, place, or thing to describe it with rich sensory details. Snapshots help immerse the reader more deeply in an article, essay, or story.

Thoughtshot – refers to snippets or shots of what a character or the writer is thinking. In writing, thoughtshots allow characters and writers to reflect on memories and predictions and their emotions about these events. This literary device can be found in both personal and fictional narratives.

What is the difference between the two?

What are some examples of “Snapshots” and “Thoughtshots” in chapter 1? Provide a quote and page number. You need one of each.
